

FIGURE 4: The final balance of the river discharge that circulates through the stations analyzed in the periods of drought (A) and rainy (B) indicates that in sygy tide conditions the transport predominates in the direction of downstream (positive values in blue), except for the IGN station (negative value in red).